

Abstract

The present invention encompasses the recognition that vectors utilized in molecular biology need not be provided as single intact molecules but rather can be assembled from fragments containing functional elements, or portions thereof. In certain preferred embodiments of the invention, vector fragments are linked together simultaneously with the linkage of vector and insert sequences to one another.